

CONTENTS

List of Figures ix
List of Tables xi
Acknowledgements xiii

01 Introduction 1

- 1.1 The relevance of employment relations 2
- 1.2 The CIPD HR Profession Map 4
- 1.3 Applying the Profession Map in practice 6
- 1.4 The structure of the book 12

02 The concepts and processes of employment relations 15

- 2.1 Introduction 16
- 2.2 What is employment relations? 17
- 2.3 Actors and interests in employment relations 18
- 2.4 Key concepts and perspectives 29
- 2.5 Frames of reference 34
- 2.6 Employment relations processes 36
- 2.7 Summary 44

03 The dynamic context of employment relations 47

- 3.1 Introduction 48
- 3.2 The changing political and economic environment 48
- 3.3 Brexit and employment relations 54
- 3.4 Globalisation and employment relations 59
- 3.5 The social context of employment relations 68
- 3.6 New technology and automation – changing the way we work 71
- 3.7 The transformation of the UK labour market 74
- 3.8 Summary 84

04 Managing employment relations 87

- 4.1 Introduction 88
- 4.2 Who manages employment relations? 89
- 4.3 What do managers do? 90
- 4.4 Working with, and without, unions 92
- 4.5 The changing roles of employers' associations 97
- 4.6 Management styles 101
- 4.7 The growing influence of HRM 104

- 4.8 Devolving the management of employment relations 105
- 4.9 Barriers to devolution – HR and the ‘line’ 108
- 4.10 Summary 112

- 05 Employment relations strategy, employee engagement and voice 115
 - 5.1 Introduction 116
 - 5.2 What is strategy? 117
 - 5.3 Employee engagement 123
 - 5.4 Employee voice 128
 - 5.5 A conceptual model of employee voice 140
 - 5.6 Summary 143

- 06 Representation at work 147
 - 6.1 Introduction 148
 - 6.2 Origins and development of trade unions 149
 - 6.3 What do unions do? 150
 - 6.4 Trade unions – a declining force? 153
 - 6.5 Explaining trade union decline 154
 - 6.6 The union response – strategies for survival, renewal and revitalisation 159
 - 6.7 Summary 175

- 07 Equality, diversity and inclusion 179
 - 7.1 Introduction 180
 - 7.2 The contribution of a feminist and intersectional lens to the study of employment relations 181
 - 7.3 The labour market, employment segregation and inequality 183
 - 7.4 Theoretical explanations for labour market segregation 189
 - 7.5 The legal context 193
 - 7.6 The organisational rationale for equality and diversity 202
 - 7.7 The role of HR, trade unions and line managers 203
 - 7.8 Summary 207

- 08 Health, well-being and the employment relationship 211
 - 8.1 Introduction 212
 - 8.2 The development of health and safety regulation in the UK 213
 - 8.3 Key elements of the law 215
 - 8.4 Mental health, stress and well-being 221
 - 8.5 Well-being at work 228
 - 8.6 Well-being, equality and inclusion 236
 - 8.7 Summary 240

- 09 The management of workplace conflict 245
- 9.1 Introduction 246
 - 9.2 Defining and conceptualising workplace conflict 246
 - 9.3 The pattern of workplace disputes in the UK 249
 - 9.4 The legal context of conflict management 258
 - 9.5 The management of conflict in UK workplaces 271
 - 9.6 Summary 279
- 10 Workplace discipline 283
- 10.1 Introduction 284
 - 10.2 Discipline – improving behaviour? 284
 - 10.3 Disciplinary procedures 285
 - 10.4 Handling disciplinary issues 296
 - 10.5 Summary 311
- 11 Managing employee grievances 313
- 11.1 Introduction 314
 - 11.2 Perceptions of mistreatment and the escalation of grievances 315
 - 11.3 The nature and pattern of employee grievances 317
 - 11.4 The benefits of effective resolution 321
 - 11.5 Handling employee grievances 321
 - 11.6 Managing the grievance procedure 333
 - 11.7 Summary 344
- 12 Managing redundancies 349
- 12.1 Introduction 350
 - 12.2 Defining redundancy 351
 - 12.3 Redundancy and the management of change 352
 - 12.4 Managing redundancy – the role of the ‘envoy’ 355
 - 12.5 Redundancy policy and procedures 356
 - 12.6 Redundancy consultation 359
 - 12.7 Compulsory redundancy 367
 - 12.8 Transfer of undertakings 372
 - 12.9 The aftermath of redundancy 373
 - 12.10 Summary 377
- 13 Workplace mediation 381
- 13.1 Introduction 382
 - 13.2 What is workplace mediation? 383
 - 13.3 A theoretical approach to workplace mediation 386
 - 13.4 The direct benefits of mediation 389
 - 13.5 Mediation – increasing conflict competence? 390
 - 13.6 Barriers to workplace mediation 392

- 13.7 Mediation in practice 394
- 13.8 The five stages of the mediation process 399
- 13.9 The skills and knowledge needed for effective mediation 401
- 13.10 Developing a model of good practice 405
- 13.11 Summary 405

14 Conclusion – the future of employment relations 409

- 14.1 Brexit – polarisation and uncertainty 409
- 14.2 The fourth industrial revolution – opportunities and threats 410
- 14.3 ‘Good work’ and the productivity puzzle 411
- 14.4 Managerial capability – the golden thread 412
- 14.5 Employee voice and representation 413
- 14.6 Revitalising employment relations 414

List of References 417

<http://www.pbookshop.com>